

Thomas E. Abernathy, IV

Partner

THOMAS E. ABERNATHY is a partner in the Atlanta office of Smith, Currie & Hancock LLP. He received his B.A. degree from Vanderbilt University. He attended law school at the University of Virginia and Vanderbilt University and received his law degree from Vanderbilt University. After law school, he served four years in the U.S. Army. He was an Associate Professor at the U.S. Army Judge Advocate General's School and taught government contract and construction law to attorneys representing various U.S. Government agencies.

After his military service, Tom came to Atlanta and has been a partner at Smith, Currie & Hancock since 1974.

Since joining the firm, Tom has represented owners, general contractors, subcontractors, and sureties on issues involving bid and award protests and construction performance problems related to changes, changed conditions, defective plans and specifications, delays, suspensions of work and termination of contracts. He has been involved in various types of construction projects ranging from federal office buildings, courthouses, and high rise buildings to bridges and highway projects, power plants, commercial and industrial construction projects.

Tom is active in the field of public contract law and served as the Chairman of the American Bar Association Section of Public Contract Law. He is a Fellow in the American College of Construction Lawyers and served on its Board of Governors. He is a member of the Construction National Panel of Neutrals for the American Arbitration Association.

Tom is married and his daughter, son-in-law and grandchildren also live in Atlanta.
